

GREENING BATH. Exploring the what-if.

Bath has proclaimed itself a ‘Landscape City’ but how green is the city centre itself, or does this title owe much to its green hillside setting?

As we face the twin challenges of biodiversity and climate emergencies could Bath show real leadership in showing what a truly green city could look like? Rob Delius, architect & head of sustainability for local practice Stride Treglown believes that our imagination is the key to creating the nature-flourishing city we want and need. He’ll be sharing a vision for the city and exploring how we can make it happen.

Rob was behind the 2022 climate art installation ‘Sinking House’ in 2024 instigated and led an international event highlighting the biodiversity crisis, called ‘a Funeral for Nature’. He has been the winner of multiple RIBA design competitions, including ‘Imagine Bath’ in 2015, and one of his previous housing projects in Somerset was named ‘most energy-efficient street in the UK’.
